1. I scored a goal on my first shot, of my first shift, of my first game in the NHL. I once scored five goals in a game in five different ways: an even-strength goal, a power-play goal, a shorthanded goal, a penalty shot goal, and an empty net goal; a "Magnificent" record that hasn't since been touched. In French, my last name means "the best".

Who am I? _____

2. I am considered by many to be the greatest hockey player of all time. My jersey had the highest number ever to be worn in an NHL game.

They called me "The Great One".

Who am I? _____

3. I was one of the first to develop a curved hockey stick to alter the predictability of a shot. I had the most feared slap shot in the National Hockey League that was once clocked at 120 mph. My nick name is "The Golden Jet"

Who am I? _____

4. I am the only player to have played in the NHL in five different decades. My two sons and I played on the same team and the same line together. I finished in the top 5 in NHL scoring for 20 straight seasons. You can call me "Mr. Hockey".

Who am I? _____

HISTORY

Triumph and Tragedy

Hall Visit Activity

The following is a true and tragic story in hockey history. This particular account was written by James Duplacey for a hockey card and became the inspiration for a song titled 'Fifty Mission Cap' by the musical group, "The Tragically Hip."

Although he was not noted for his offensive skills, Bill Barilko scored one of the most celebrated goals in NHL history during the 1951 Stanley Cup finals between Toronto and Montreal. This series was the only championship final that required overtime in every contest.

In game five, the extra session was nearly three minutes old when Barilko spotted a loose puck near the Montreal crease. He dove in from the blue line and fired a shot over Montreal goaltender Gerry McNeil's outstretched arm to give the Leafs the Cup.

Unfortunately, it was the last goal of Barilko's career. He disappeared that summer on a fishing trip, and the Leafs didn't win another Cup until 1962, the year his body was found.

There are many stories of inspirational Hockey Hall of Fame members who have experienced tragedy within their career. Look up one of the following players and find information that is inspirational or tragic: Howie Morenz, Bobby Orr and Gordon "Mr. Hockey" Howe. Information can be found on the computer terminals in the Esso Great Hall.
