LETTER FROM THE CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD

Dear Teammates,

Now almost nine months into my “rookie year” as Chairman of the Board, it has been a wonderful experience both personally and professionally (not to mention from a learning perspective). In this short timeframe, I have come to appreciate that there is a lot more going on with day to day operations than what I had perceived prior to joining the Board, and much of the credit for the Hall’s continued success goes to our dedicated staff.

One of my first priorities was to get to know the staff on a personal level with a view to open communications and teamwork throughout the organization. I had the pleasure of attending our staff retreat last September and found out that many started as volunteers and worked their way into part-time and eventually full-time positions (with average service in excess of 20 years) – a sure sign that they love what they do!

Only a few days after the retreat, I attended my first IIHF meetings at the Semi-Annual Congress in Croatia where I realized the complexity of the expanding hockey world (and that there is more to hockey than hockey!). And from there back to Canada, as the 2015-16 season got underway, the staff kicked into high gear preparing for yet another big Induction Weekend in November. This being my first induction as Chairman, I definitely felt some “rookie butterflies” (and excitement) heading into the celebrations. Again, a total team effort made the events exceptional and especially so memorable for the inductees and their families.

Looking ahead, there is no shortage of events that will be good for business in the next year or two, be it the World Cup of Hockey, the World Junior Championship, the centennial celebrations of the NHL and Toronto Maple Leafs, etc. With partnerships at the forefront of the Hall’s growth strategy, I look forward to on-going collaboration with our key stakeholders and, in that regard, we always appreciate your feedback and support.

With best regards,

Lanny McDonald
Chairman of the Board

HOCKEY HALL OF FAME PRESERVE OUR GAME CAMPAIGN (2016-2020)

Hockey Hall of Fame launches new fundraising initiative to enhance public accessibility to its vast collection.

The economic viability of the Hockey Hall of Fame depends on the continued generation of income from admissions, retail sales, facility sales/hospitality services, corporate sponsorships, licensing partnerships, archival services, special events (including the annual Induction Weekend/Celebration) and charitable contributions. As a not-for-profit corporation and registered charity under the Income Tax Act (Canada), cumulative surplus funds from operations after debt service obligations are reinvested in capital assets including improvements to the Hockey Hall of Fame attraction and archive facilities. →

Craig Campbell/Hockey Hall of Fame

Over 5,000 milestone hockey sticks are archived at the D.K. (Doc) Seaman Hockey Resource Centre.

On September 8, 2009, the Hockey Hall of Fame established the D.K. (Doc) Seaman Hockey Resource Centre, an 18,000-square-foot, state-of-the-art archive and research facility located in the Lakeshore West district of Toronto within the newly-built, 4-pad arena complex that houses the practice/training facilities of the Toronto Maple Leafs and Toronto Marlies.

Today, the Hockey Hall of Fame owns an incredibly vast collection of artifacts, memorabilia and other historic materials relating to the game of hockey, and like most similar institutions, it is challenged with an ever growing backlog of new and prior acquisitions that require cataloguing documentation and/or conservation treatments (including the digital preservation of archival materials i.e., photographic images, motion video/film, historic documents, etc., for public access and content initiatives).

Generally, the availability of funds for these purposes is highly limited. It is for this reason that the Hockey Hall of Fame has launched a new fundraising initiative, namely, Preserve Our Game Campaign. Unless otherwise specified by the donor, at least 75% of all individual monetary donations received in the 2016-2020 fiscal years (the balance to support sustainable operations) will be allocated to fulfill the mandate of the Hockey Hall of Fame's D.K. (Doc) Seaman Hockey Resource Centre as follows:

- To collect, document and preserve objects, images and historical resource materials connected with the game of hockey.
- To maintain a comprehensive archive of documents, books and periodicals relevant to the history and current development of hockey, serving as the principal research facility for the history of hockey.
- To develop and prepare museum exhibits and interpretive programs to entertain and educate the public about all facets of hockey, including outreach programs to reach a wider audience (i.e. traveling exhibitions, multi-tiered education programs, publishing initiatives, etc.).
- To provide archival services and access to its museum collection and archival materials for the purpose of licensing commercial and non-commercial activities.
- To promote the game of hockey and its rich history both in Canada and abroad.

Cash (and "gift in-kind") donations will not only help the Hockey Hall of Fame preserve objects, images and histories that are significant to the story of hockey but it will also enhance access to the Hall's collections via future online and outreach initiatives.

For more information, visit HHOF.com/donate.

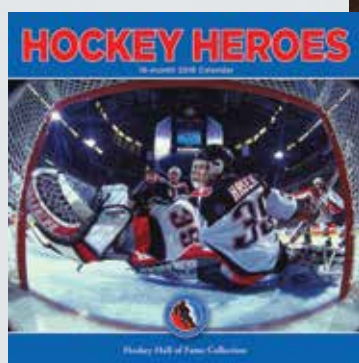

THROUGH THE "PRESERVE OUR GAME CAMPAIGN", DONORS WILL JOIN THE LEGENDS OF THE GAME WHO HAVE ALL MADE CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE HALL OF FAME'S GROWTH AND DEVELOPMENT, AND TOGETHER, WILL PRESERVE THE RICH HISTORY OF HOCKEY FOR THE BENEFIT OF PRESENT AND FUTURE GENERATIONS OF FANS.

INTERNATIONAL BLEND

CHAMPIONSHIP PEDIGREE

Inducted into the Hockey Hall of Fame as a Builder in 2010, Jim Devellano, currently the Detroit Red Wings Senior Vice President & Alternate Governor, has had a long and storied career of success wherever he has plied his trade. He joined the NHL as a scout with the St. Louis Blues in 1967 and after five seasons, was hired by the New York Islanders. Quickly progressing through the ranks, Devellano was instrumental in not only helping build the Islanders' dynasty of four consecutive Stanley Cup titles, but also a successful minor league program; a blueprint that he would use later in his career with the Detroit Red Wings. Entering the 2015-16 season, Devellano, now 72 years of age, was entering his golden anniversary 50th year of working in the NHL and wanted a safe and secure location to preserve his legacy. Just prior to the 2015 Hockey Hall of Fame Induction Celebration, we received one of our most significant donations ever upon receiving all 14 of Devellano's championship rings. Included in the donation were seven Stanley Cup rings (1980, 1981, 1982 with New York Islanders & 1997, 1998, 2002, 2008 with Detroit Red Wings), four American Hockey League Calder Cup rings (1986, 1989, 1992 with Adirondack Red Wings & 2013 with Grand Rapids Griffins), two Central Hockey League Adams Cup rings (1978 with Fort Worth Texans & 1982 with Indianapolis Checkers) and one East Coast Hockey League Riley Cup ring (1994 with Toledo Storm). Devellano's entire championship ring collection can currently be viewed in the Honda NHL Zone of the Hockey Hall of Fame as a truly remarkable depiction of a championship pedigree.

THREE IN SIX

After making the trip to the Hall of Fame in both 2010 and 2013, the Chicago Blackhawks staff had so much fun that they decided to win a third Stanley Cup title in six seasons, defeating the Tampa Bay Lightning in six games to add yet another championship ring to the Hall's championship silverware collection. The Hawks staff, led by President and CEO John McDonough, made the now semi-annual trek to Yonge and Front Streets on January 15, 2016 to present Curator Phil Pritchard with this year's version of the club's ring. The 14-karat white gold ring boasts 355 round, pear, marquise and custom princess-cut diamonds that come together to create a stunning all white ring that tops over 10.8 carats. The iconic Blackhawks logo created with custom-cut diamonds sits atop 50 custom princess-cut diamonds.

The words 'Stanley Cup Champions' surround the top and bottom giving way to four shimmering rows of diamonds, which are master set and cascade down the side of the ring in a waterfall effect.

STORYBOOK CLASSIC

When the NHL went to the exciting, new 3-on-3 tournament format for their annual NHL All-Star Game held in Nashville this past January, never could they have imagined the storyline that would take place. Arizona Coyotes enforcer John Scott would not only be voted as captain of the Pacific Division All-Stars by the fans, but he would then subsequently be traded to the Montreal Canadiens and find himself in the AHL as a member of the St. John's IceCaps. With the NHL's decision to allow Scott to play in the annual Classic, he became an immediate fan favourite, and proceeded to lead his team to a $1 million victory by scoring two goals in the tournament and was named the Most Valuable Player. Immediately after the final game, Scott's helmet was given to the Hall of Fame's curatorial team for posterity and can now be seen on display in the Honda NHL Zone.

A TRUE PIONEER

In February, the Hockey Hall of Fame's Resource Centre representatives visited the nearby Stratford Perth Museum in Stratford, Ontario, to receive a significant historical hockey stick that was being donated and now serves as a key artifact within the newly unveiled 'The Changing Face of Hockey - Diversity in Our Game' exhibit. The stick belonged to Charles "Charlie" Lightfoot, who was a member of the Stratford Hockey Club during the early 1900's (1900-05) and who won an OHA Junior Championship for the town in 1900. Born in 1880 in West Flamborough, Ontario, Lightfoot is recognized as one of the first black players in organized hockey. Originally one of two sticks donated to the Stratford Museum by sportswriter Harold "Winger" Thomas, the stick now commemorates a long-forgotten memory, yet, a very significant personality and moment in the game's great history.
